Parenthetical References

The sources that you use should be cited in the text of your paper, either in a parentheses or as part of the text itself:

During the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation (Hodges, 2000).

Hodges (2000) discussed how, during the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation.

In a 2000 article, Hodges discussed how, during the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation.

The references above refer to the entire source in a general way. If you are referring to a specific part of the source - or quoting exactly - include the specific page number(s) of that part:

(Hodges, 2000, p. 179)

(Devine & Sherman, 1992, pp. 156-157)

(National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, 2007, para. 3)   [document has a corporate author]

("The Roddenberry Legacy," 2007, paras. 5-6)   [document has no author; see notes]

(Star Trek: Four Generations, 1995, pp. 63-66)   [document has no author; see notes]

("Star Trek Planet Classifications," n.d., Other Classes section, para. 2)   [document has no author; see notes]

(Crusade2267, 2006, 3:36)   [for videos and other recordings, include the timestamp of the section that you are referring to]

Sources with three through five authors:

(Kirk, Spock, McCoy, & Scott, 1966, p. 1701)   [for the first time you cite it]

(Kirk et al., 1966, p. 1701)   [for all other times you cite it]

Sources with six authors or more:

(Picard et al., 1987, p. 1701d)   [for every time you cite it, but include up to seven authors in the full reference. If there are more, include the first six, followed by an ellipse (...) followed by the last of the names.]

- Older hardcopy publications will not have a DOI, and it can be left out.

- Websites:
- If no author is given, start with the title and then the date. Note that some authors on the internet use a screen name instead of their real name and that an organization can also be an author (a "corporate author").
- If possible, include the month and day that the page was created.
- New! If a webpage is part of a larger website, do not italicize the title of the page. If the webpage is an independent document on the website, do italicize the title of the page. This is also a judgment call that you will have to make. If you are not sure, do not italicize.
- If a webpage is likely to change over time, such as a wiki or personal website, include the date that you looked at the page. Webpages that provide journal articles, books, or reports from publishing companies, professional associations, and government agencies are less likely to change and do not require retrieval dates. This is also a judgment call that you will have to make.
- If the date the page was created is not given, use (n.d.). See examples under Encyclopedia Article.
- If the name of the website is the same as the name of the author, you do not need to include it a second time. This is especially likely to happen with the websites for government agencies and professional associations (see the examples for National Aeronautics and Space Administration). If the name of the website is obvious from the URL, you do not need to include it (another judgment call).
- If the URL does not fit on one line, divide it before any punctuation marks (except for the "http://").
- If you are citing the web version of a hardcopy source, format it the same way that you would the hardcopy source and include the relevant retrieval information.

- Parenthetical References:
- If there is no author, use the first few words of the title. Unlike citations in the reference list, capitalize all significant words. Article, chapter, and webpage titles are placed in quotation marks. Book, periodical, report, and brochure titles are placed in italics. Note that an organization can also be an author (a "corporate author").
- If two authors have the same last name, include the first initial(s).
- Use only the year, even if the full citation in the reference list includes the month and day. If you cite the same source a second time in the same paragraph, you do not need to mention the year a second time.
- If there are no page numbers, you can count the paragraph numbers or list the name of a section or leave this information out if neither of these is practical.

- The rules concerning a title within a title are not displayed above in order to avoid confusing people. In these examples, Star trek would be italicized if it appears in the non-italicized title of an article and not italicized if it appears in the italicized title of a book (reverse italicization). See the example for Ebert under newspaper.
